Experienced Labor May Be Secured From Spain

STACKABLE TOLD TO INVESTIGATE

"The last we heard from Collector Stackable was from Rome," said a member of the Board of Immigration this morning. "He cabled us from that point that Commissioner Sargent of the Bureau of Commerce and Labor was coming here, which we already knew from the press dispatches. "I believe that Stackable is now in Spain."

Beyond the fact that the merest mention was made of Spain as a possible labor field by H. P. Baldwin in his letter to the Planters' Association as its retiring president, nothing has heretofore been made public regarding this phase of the immigration work.

In the meantime Stackable has been instructed to look up labor conditions in Spain for the purpose of ascertaining whether it seems feasible to obtain labor from that quarter. Should this be possible, the planters would have good cause to rejoice, as this class of laborers would be particularly desirable.

There is considerable sugar cane raised in the southern part of Spain, particularly around the town of Malaga, and, as the industry is at present in a pretty bad way, it is reported that the laborers there might be induced to leave for other and more profitable fields. As these laborers are skilled in the cultivation of cane, and, above all, used to the hard work required in the cane fields, they would naturally be a most desirable character of immigrants for Hawaii.

On the other hand, this bright phase of the situation is to some extent darkened by the prospect of possible difficulties in getting them. Spain is not particularly friendly towards the United States, especially since the recent war, and should the Spanish government choose to put obstacles in the way of emigration, a thing which under the elaborate passport system of that country could easily be done, it would be practically useless and a waste of time to attempt to obtain the immigrants.

These circumstances explain the fact that the Board of Immigration has said but little about the matter, as it is quite possible that nothing will come of it. However, Stackable's investigation will show whether these laborers can be obtained or not, and should his report be favorable, it is firmly believed that an excellent stroke of business will have been accomplished.

GRAND JURY GETS CASE OF GOLD FEET

No One Would Swear To Warrant Charging Gambling

GAME OF PASS THE BUCK PLAYED IN POLICE COURT

NO ONE FOUND TO MAKE COMPLAINT AGAINST 68 CHINESE ARRESTED IN THE RAID OF YESTERDAY

The members of the Grand Jury which made a raid on the house at the corner of Maunakea and Hotel streets yesterday and, with the assistance of Sheriff Brown and Attorney-General Prosser, arrested 68 Chinese, got cold feet this morning when it came to swearing to a warrant. They were all present in the Police Court, but there was none of them who was willing to affix his name to a document charging the arrested men with gambling or being present at a place where gambling was going on.

It was funny, pathetically funny. Prosecuting Attorney Andrade buzzed around with a worried look on his face. He wasn't anxious to bring the cases to trial. In fact, that was the last thing in the world that he wanted to do. And the members of the Grand Jury who so valiantly made the raid, talked in groups, trying to find some graceful way out of the dilemma. No one seemed to know what to do. It was easy enough to go to a house and arrest a lot of men, but none of them wanted to take the responsibility of swearing that there was a gambling game going on. They all passed the buck. How did they know that the Chinese were not there for the purpose of attending religious services or organizing a society for the study of Browning?

The only way Andrade and the members of the Grand Jury could see out of the pickle was to ask for a continuance. Andrade moved that the cases be continued until next Tuesday. He pleaded for it earnestly. There must be some way of saving the face of the Grand Jury. Perhaps by Tuesday some one might be found who would take the responsibility of swearing to a warrant. But it was impossible to try the Chinese this morning, for there was nothing to try them for. They were under arrest, but were not charged with any violation of the law.

"We are not ready to proceed today," said Andrade. "It would be impossible. And I do not think that the defendants will suffer any great injury by the postponement of the cases. Attorneys Chillingworth and Mott-Smith represented the accused but not charged Chinese."

SCORES IN FIRST HALF

(Associated Press Special Cable)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 24.—Yale defeated Harvard in the annual football game here today by a score of 60 in one of the greatest games ever seen on the local gridiron. The victory carries with it the college championship of the United States. It was a magnificent game from every point of view, Yale outplaying her rivals with the exception of the punting.

Captain Morse of the Yale team won the toss for his side and chose the north goal, giving Yale a slight advantage from the breeze which was blowing. Soon after the opening of the first half, Yale carried the ball down the field in a series of hard plays and Roome, who replaced Knox, made the only touchdown of the game. Veeder kicked the goal.

Considerable punting marked the second half, and Yale neared Harvard's goal line several times but was unable to score again. The game ended with the ball in Harvard's territory on the 10-yard line.

CAPTAIN GARRETT OF ALBATROSS LOST OVERBOARD

Lieutenant Commander Leroy Mason Garrett, captain of the United States Fish Commission vessel Albatross, which arrived this morning from Yokohama, was lost overboard Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The accident occurred when the Albatross was about 500 miles northwest of Honolulu.

Lieutenant A. J. Hepburn, who took command of the Albatross after the loss of the captain, gives the following account of the accident: "The weather had been very rough all the way across. At 7:30 o'clock on the evening of the 21st we were steaming since at about 11 knots with all sail set and the engines going full speed. The Captain was sitting

NEVER SENT PLANS FOR LEPROSARIUM

Cable Message Received From Washington By Gov. Carter

WERE GIVEN NO CHANCE WHAT-EVER TO BID ON GOVERNMENT WORK TO BE DONE ON MOLOKAI

In reply to a cable from Governor Carter asking if any plans and specifications for the building of the Leprosarium on Molokai had been forwarded to this city, that the contractors here might have an opportunity to bid on the work, a message was received today, stating that no plans had been sent to this city. The message was from the office of the Government Architect at Washington.

The contractors of this city naturally feel that they have been badly treated in not being given a chance to compete with the contractors on the mainland in work which was to be done in this Territory. It is possible that steps will be taken to have the bids reopened when the situation has been explained to the officials.

Fred Harrison said this afternoon: "I do not think that the local contractors have been very well treated in the matter, though personally I do not think that I should have put in a bid on it, anyhow. On other Government work we were given a chance to bid, as, for instance, in the case of the Government buildings at the new military reservation here."

"I do not think, however, that there could be any intention of slighting Honolulu in the matter, but that it was simply a mistake or an oversight in Washington."

In a reclining deck chair on the port side of the poop, which was the weather side. Suddenly there was a heavy lurch of the steamer to starboard. No one saw the accident, but we have figured it out this way: The chair slid across the slippery, wet deck and hit the starboard rail with terrific force. The force with which it struck the rail was so great that one panel of the lattice-work was broken out, twelve wires being broken. The Captain went either over the rail or through the hole made by the chair, probably the former, as if he had gone under he would probably have grasped the chair, which was driven half through the railing lattice-work.

"Somebody raised a cry of man overboard. We do not know who did it first, but it is probable that it was the Captain himself. Several of the officers were on the main deck immediately under the poop and heard the cry, as if some one had been hurt, but they thought that it was an accident in the engine room. Some one forward recognized the Captain's voice and cried 'Man Overboard' in an uncertain way. The Quartermaster repeated the cry. It must have been 10 or 20 seconds, however, before any outcry was made."

"I was in the wardroom, and ran up on deck immediately. A life buoy was thrown overboard, but must have fallen 200 yards from the Captain. He was a fair swimmer but there was a heavy sea running, and even if he had not been hurt by striking the rail, it would have been impossible for him to swim to the buoy."

"The helm was put hard up and sail was shortened at once. We cruised around the locality until daylight the next morning, using our searchlight, but could find nothing of either the Captain or the life buoy. At daylight we gave it up and came on to Honolulu."

"Lieutenant Commander Garrett was about 49 years old and unmarried. He was going up for his command ship as soon as he got back, having made his points. The only thing left was for him to pass his examination for his mother at Plattsburg, New York."

Iaukea Files Answer To Brown's Petition For Recount

WANTS ALL VOTES CAST RECOUNTED

The answer of Curtis Iaukea to the petition of Sheriff A. M. Brown, asking for a recount of the votes cast at the recent election was filed this morning in the Supreme Court by W. A. Kinney, attorney for the respondent. The answer consists, in general, of a complete denial of the charges made in the petition. It denies that there were votes which were cast for Brown thrown out when they should have been counted and also that there were votes counted for Iaukea which should have been thrown out.

It alleged that there were a large number of ballots which were illegally cast for Brown and also claims that there were a large number, over fifty, ballots which were legally cast for Iaukea but which were wrongfully thrown out and not counted.

He further prays the court, in case a recount is ordered, that the whole of the ballots rejected be recounted, including such ballots as were rejected by the officers of election, and that all legal votes cast for respondent, whether rejected or not, be counted as against all legal votes cast for complainant, whether rejected or not, and the title to said office of Sheriff awarded accordingly.

And said respondent prays for such other and further relief in the premises as may be just and equitable.

questing this Honorable Court to order a recount of the ballots cast at said election, he denied.

And said respondent further prays that in the event of this Honorable Court ordering a recount of the ballots cast at said election, or of any of the ballots alleged in said petition or in the answer of this respondent to have been illegally rejected, that there be a recount of the whole of the ballots so rejected, including such ballots as were illegally rejected by the officers of such election and which were cast for said respondent, as alleged herein, and that all legal votes cast for respondent, whether rejected or not, be counted as against all legal votes cast for complainant, whether rejected or not, and the title to said office of Sheriff awarded accordingly.

And said respondent prays for such other and further relief in the premises as may be just and equitable.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE

In the case of the Territory vs. Kalo Kalawala, charged with murder in the first degree, a motion for a new trial was granted yesterday by Judge De Bolt on the motion of Attorney Ayon H. Crook. The principal ground for the motion was the failure of the prosecution to show premeditation and intent on the part of the accused. Judge De Bolt stated in granting the motion that at the time on account of the brutality of the defendant he considered the verdict a just one, but on considering the case more carefully and reading the motion he came to the conclusion that the premeditation did not appear clearly enough to warrant a verdict of murder in the first degree. The defendant then offered to plead guilty to murder in the second degree, which was acceptable to the prosecution and Judge De Bolt sentenced him to life imprisonment.
